SYNOPSIS

Larry is employed in the Sawmill. The boss' daughter is in love with him; and the foreman jealously objects, which causes all the trouble that follows. The owner and his daughter come to the mill to look things over and become involved with the rest in the general mixup. The owner refuses to listen to further explanation from the foreman and discharges him with his assistants. Larry serenades the daughter, and the father chases him. Just then the foreman and his gang return to revenge themselves on the owner. Larry and the girl take refuge in the big safe. The dog turns the tables on the gang, and the house is blown to atoms. The safe lands safely, and Larry and the girl are discovered unharmed. She is captured by the gang who put her in a shack, with a guard. Larry rescues her from a tree with a long rope. The villains cut the tree down however, and the two land in the lake. The father escaping his tormentors, wishes to thank Larry, and instead, embraces the lake. Larry and the girl are happily kissing, when Larry discovers the father descending upon him, and he turns and runs, as the picture fades.
